

THE MEMPHIS DAILY APPEAL.

BY MCLANAHAN & DILL.

MEMPHIS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1860.

VOLUME XI.—NUMBER 280.

Daily Appeal.

THE TRAILER'S SPRINGFIELD SPEECH.

In yesterday's edition of the Missouri Democrat, Liverpool, we find the following, to which we call the attention of all citizens both North and South:

THE TRIAL OF PARSON EPPER.—In laying before our readers the speech delivered by Senator Trumbull, at the celebration at Springfield, of the anniversary of the birth of Lincoln, we remark that too much significance cannot be attached to it. Every disqualification that can be urged against the trial of Parson Epper, will affect the trial of Lincoln. The PRESIDENT ELECT, and his FELLOW APPROVAL, BEFORE IT WAS SIGNED, are sufficient evidence that Judges Trumbull is understanding the meaning of the document. He had not full warrant for advancing. His very early qualities have led him to that which he himself himself is perplexed from doing after it is done.

Then follows, in another column, Mr. Trumbull's speech, from which we make the following extracts:

The Trial of Parson Epper, South Carolina, were to represent their constitutional views, and their feelings, declare the State of the Union, and the condition of the country. When it is to do so. Manifestly if it were to do so, the whole United States officers would be called upon to collect the forces of the country, and to march to the rescue of our neighbors.

This would be repulsive, and would bring upon us a war, and southern considerations, much greater than any that could go to work and bring about at once the separation, and dismember our states of the public mind, could not afford.

Then follows, much good might result and no evil.

In the proceeding we should show to the world a disposition to exhaust every possible means to sustain our rights, and a firm determination to maintain our rights.

Such a step, too, would not be becoming.

Such a step, too, would not be becoming.